CLOSING THE FOOD GAP
FINDING OUR WAY TO A
JUST AND SUSTAINABLE
FOOD SYSTEM FOR ALL

A public lecture by food activist
Mark Winne

Monday, April 12 at 7 PM
Gallagher Business Building, Room 122
UM Campus

For 35 years, Mark Winne has worked to close the food gap, from organizing breakfast programs for low-income kids in Maine and starting farmers’ markets in inner-city Hartford, to developing innovative national food policies. In his 2008 book, Closing the Food Gap, Winne argues that no matter what aspect of the subject is considered – hunger, obesity or the latest organic and local food trends – food is emblematic of a promise fulfilled for some but that falls short for so many. He will offer compelling ideas for making local, organic, and nutritious food available for everyone.
